Section–A (Reading Skills)

1. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow :

Dr. C. V. Raman was the genius who won the Nobel Prize for Physics, with simple equipment barely worth Rs. 300. He was the first Asian scientist to win the Nobel Prize. He was a man of boundless curiosity and a lively sense of humour. His spirit of inquiry and devotion to science laid the foundation for scientific research in India. And he won honour as a scientist and affection as a teacher and a man. Raman was studious. He kept in touch with the latest development in science in the world around him. He had personal contact with many scientists. He used to read new books and research papers from different centres. "The equipment which brought me the Nobel Prize did not cost more than three hundred rupees. A table drawer can hold all my research equipment," he used to say with pride. It was his conviction that if the research worker is not inspired from within, any amount of money cannot bring success in research.
